The FARMERS CORNER

by RALPH H. TAYLOR
Executive Secretary
Agricultural Council of California

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third of four articles by Ralph H. Taylor, farm leader and legislative observer analyzing the relief and taxation problems now in sharp focus as a result of the stand of the bi-partisan economy bloc in the Legislature against politics and extravagance in relief, and against further tax increases.

When the special session of the State Legislature reconvenes on May 13, Governor Olson, without doubt, will make another determined drive for new tax proposals and increases in existing taxes—arguing that the additional revenues are needed to finance the relief load and to clear the State deficit.

And taxpayers can not afford to be lulled into false security by the mere fact that the Legislature, at its session a few weeks ago, refused to sanction new taxes.

The economy bloc in both houses will be subject to terrific pressure from State department heads and relief recipients (through the Workers' Alliance, Labor's Non-Partisan League and other pressure group lobbies) to ease up restrictions on relief spending and vote additional taxes. And unless California taxpayers are vigilant in their own defense, it is altogether possible that the lid may be blown off again due to a break in the economy bloc alignment.

California's major farm organizations are opposed to any and all tax increases—a position which they assumed a year ago, when it became apparent that the tax ceiling had been reached and that additional tax burdens would only add to unemployment and distress by destroying jobs in private employment and retarding recovery.

There is also a firm conviction on the part of most taxpayers, well supported by current conditions, that bureaucratic government has expanded by such leaps and bounds during recent years that public officials need to be pulled up short—and told, most emphatically, that taxpayers can't and won't put up the funds for a continuation of the political spending debauch. In California, the tax burden—for local, State and federal purposes—has more than doubled in six years. And the cost of State government, during that period, has led all the rest, trailing in the short span of six years.

In the face of such conditions, a sizable State deficit, which can't be increased much more without impairing the State's credit, is probably a healthy deterrent to continued extravagance. And most thoughtful students of the situation are inclined to let the deficit stand until the State administration has evidenced some inclination to heed the public demand for retrenchment and economy.

Certainly it would be foolhardy to levy new taxes to wipe out the present State over-draft, when there is a strong suspicion that this would let down the bars to a new era of spending in excess of income, which, in turn, would produce a new deficit.

Insofar as the necessary functions of government are concerned, there is every indication that present State tax sources will yield sufficient income during the coming two years to pay the overhead—providing relief expenditures are held in check, as advocated by the Senate-Assembly economy bloc.

Substantial assistance in getting State government back on a sound basis—in order that needs can be accurately estimated, and so that payroll-paddling, chiseling and waste of public funds can be prevented—will likely come from the work of the special committees which are investigating the relief and tax problems during the present legislative recess.

It was all too apparent from the repeated relief "emergencies" which developed during the recent legislative session, with the SRA each time demanding additional appropriations, that no one in the relief administration had any accurate knowledge of what they were actually spending, or needed to spend. The Senate-Assembly relief fact-finding committee, now at work, hopes to bring order out of chaos in the SRA financial tangle and submit accurate information to the Legislature, when it reconvenes, which will permit of intelligent action and elimination of guess-work. RAINBOW GIRLS NOTE BIRTHDAY

Placerville Assembly's Tenth Anniversary Was Observed On Saturday

Placerville Assembly, Order of the Rainbow for Girls, observed the tenth anniversary of its establishment at a dinner and meeting on Saturday night at the Masonic temple during which special compliment was paid five Past Mother Advisors of the assembly and its charter members in attendance.

The dinner was prepared by a committee of ladies of St. Annes Guild of the Episcopal Church and was served by members of El Dorado Chapter Order of De Molay.

In the meeting of the assembly which followed, the majority service degree was conferred upon three members, Ruth Gregor, Jeanette Landis and Helen Baer, while special certificates were presented to Ella Roddan Clark and Frances Ellis Raudio, two members of the assembly whose active participation was completed when they were married.

All charter members in attendance were escorted and presented with corsages as were the past Mother advisors, who included Mrs. M. T. Kelly, Mrs. B. E. Larson, Mrs. Mae Green, Mrs. George M. Smith and Mrs. Ferol Ellis.

Miss Maxine Miller spoke on behalf of the assembly a word of greeting and an appropriate tribute to the charter members and other active in the earlier years of the assembly and Miss Joyce Lynn Douglas responded on behalf of the charter members.

Placer Dean Won't Quit

Dr. Napier Asks For Resignation Of Dean Wyman Olson

AUBURN (UP)—Petitions were being circulated today asking that Wyman E. Olson, Dean of Placer Junior College, be retained in his position.

Olson last week received a written request for his resignation from Dr. Napier, director of the college and principal of the Placer Union High School. The dean is under tenure, however, and has indicated he will not resign.

A group of citizens who protested Dr. Napier's action was told charges against Olson include insubordination and inefficiency, but circulators of the petitions contend the charges are "trivial."

Dr. Max Dunlevitz, a member of the citizens' group, said the inefficiency charge appeared to be based on alleged failure of Olson to certify a student as eligible for the basketball team.

OLSON SAYS HE FAVORS A CONSTRUCTIVE PROGRAM

SACRAMENTO (UP)—Gov. Culbert Olson defied his political opponents today and in an indirect reference to the recall movement, against him declared he would hold to what he believes is a "progressive, constructive" program.

The investigations of legislative committees which have pondered Olson's administration, he labelled mere "mud slinging tactics." He titled his speech "The Theory, Purpose and Practice of Political Misrepresentation."

The governor charged his opponents are engaging in a partisan and personal campaign to discredit his administration and program because they fear "our appeal to the people to elect a legislature to support this program might be heeded by the people."

Warren Billings Gets Reno Wedding License

RENO (UP)—Warren Knox Billings, preparedness day bombing figure, and Miss Josephine Rudolph, San Mateo WPA worker, obtained a marriage license here today.

They indicated they would be married immediately.

Mrs. Grant Johnson, who had spent several days here with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. T. Kelly, returned Sunday to Richmond, accompanied by her husband, who had come up for the day.

LEGION ESSAY AWARDS NEAR

Winners To Receive Prizes This Week; Assembly Is Planned

El Dorado Post No. 119, American Legion, will this week announce the winners of its annual Americanization essay contest for seventh and eighth grade pupils of the county schools and will present awards to the winners at exercises in their respective school buildings.

Thomas Maul, chairman of the committee in charge, announced on Monday morning that awards probably will be presented to winners in the rural schools on Tuesday. The Placerville Grammar school will hold an assembly on Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, at which the awards will be presented to the winners in that school.

The contest is conducted in two divisions, one for the pupils of the seventh and eighth grades of rural schools, and the other for the pupils of the seventh and eighth grades of the Placerville grammar school. There are three awards, consisting of medals and cash prizes in each division.

Mr. Maul was reluctant to announce the names of any of the essay contest winners until they have been "surprised" by receiving their awards.

In announcing plans for the assembly at Placerville Grammar School Wednesday afternoon, school officials invited the attendance of the general public and parents of school children and especially the parents of seventh and eighth grade pupils.

The program will include selections by the school orchestra and vocal numbers by the sixth grade chorus.

Garden Section Meets Tuesday Afternoon

The regular meeting of the Garden Section of the Shakespeare Club will be held Tuesday afternoon at the clubhouse with Mrs. S. M. Speers as section chairman and Mrs. R. G. Risser and Mrs. Percy McNe as assisting chairmen.

Another event of the week in the club program is the desert whist party planned for Thursday afternoon, March 28th, at the clubhouse at one-thirty o'clock.

FITZGERALD REVIEWS VISIT TO ORIENT AT FARM CENTER

Members of the Missouri Flat farm center, at their meeting Friday night at the Missouri Flat community hall, enjoyed as a special treat a talk by E. J. Fitzgerald, reporting on his visit last fall to Hawaii, Japan, China and the Philippines.

An additional special feature of the program for the meeting was a talk by Harry Hyatt, of the Soil Conservation Service calling attention to the purpose of the recent observance throughout the state of the sixth annual Conservation Week.

Warren Kerr, of Placerville, reported to Sacramento police that two leather jackets had been stolen from his car Sunday, while the machine was parked in the capital city near Eighth and K Streets.

Among Saturday visitors in the county seat were Albert Herzog, of Lotus, and James Kelly and sister, Miss Margaret, of Kelsey.

CHANGE DUE IN AUTO AGENCIES

Collins Will Move To Sacramento St., Wilson Withdraws As Dealer

Changes affecting two automobile dealerships in the county seat will be under way between this time and June 1st, when C. S. Collins expects to establish his Studebaker dealership on Sacramento Street in the building occupied for years past by the Ford dealer.

Mr. Collins purchased the building on the site about a year ago from Mrs. W. S. Kirk and at that time gave a year's notice of his intention to occupy the property.

In connection with this change, Russell J. Wilson, who holds the Ford and Lincoln dealership, has asked to be relieved of the dealership and Herman Herr, special business representative of the Ford Motor Company, is here arranging the details of the change.

Allen Otto, manager for Mr. Wilson, revealed during the weekend that he has accepted the opportunity to become connected with the Ellsworth Harrold company, dealers in Fords and Lincolns, at Sacramento upon the termination of Mr. Wilson's dealership here.

Mr. Wilson is withdrawing from the automobile field so that he may center his entire attention on mining and the development of the (Continued on Page Four)

Park Expansion Is Opposed

Northern Counties Act To Prevent Taking Land From Their Tax Rolls

SACRAMENTO (UP)—Officials of 18 northern California counties today pushed a campaign to halt removal of land from county tax rolls through expansion of federal and state parks.

At a meeting called by the California Association of Federal Land Counties, E. P. Denny, Siskiyou county supervisor was named temporary chairman of the drive and Judge A. L. Childs of Humboldt county announced that a campaign fund of $1950 had been collected.

The county supervisors and other officials heard reports that 45 per cent of California lands are owned by the federal government and that land withdrawals are impoverishing many counties.

Sun's Bombardment Of Earth Eases; 7 "Spots" Blamed

NEW YORK, MARCH 25—(UP)—The sun's bombardment of the earth diminished in its fury today and the affairs of puny man returned to normal.

The sun used, not explosives, but electric impudences and was flinging them through 92,830,000 miles of space at its satellite, the earth.

As a result the communications of the earth were disrupted, continents had but the feeblest contact at the height of the bombardment, cities lost contact. The news of Europe's war to the Americas was slowed and the man in New York City couldn't wish his mother in Omaha, Neb., a happy Easter.

The bombardment was most furious between 10 a. m. and 1 p. m. yesterday when there was practically a total blanketing out of domestic telephone, telegraph and radio communications and of inter-continental radio communication. The cables, too, were disrupted. Early today, the ocean radio still stuttered with heavy static which made its messages almost impossible to read.

Engineers of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., operators of the largest system of land wires, could recall nothing that had disrupted the system so much. Telegraph companies were unable to send thousands of eastern messages for hours.

The minute place of earth in the cosmic scheme was set forth by scientists. There was a disturbance, a "tornado," on the surface of the sun. This was manifested by the appearance of "spots" on the sun's surface. Electrical impulses were sent hurtling through space. They never reached the earth, but were deflected by the earth's atmosphere some 30 miles away, to the north and south poles.

The effect of the collision of the impulses traveling through the atmosphere scrambling the man made electrical impulses traveling through the atmosphere. Radio signals became a roaring static. Long distance telephone lines were loaded with unpenetrable noise. A cosmic, unseen operator worked along side the earthly operators on telegraph lines and the teletype circuits of press associations, police departments, airports, and railroads, adding meaningless impulses that made the work of the earthly operators "hash."

Aurora Borealis—Northern Lights—flashed across the northern horizon and Aurora Polar—Southern Lights—lit up south polar regions as the result of the impulses reaching the magnetic fields of the north and south poles.

William H. Barton, Jr., executive curator of the Hayden Planetarium, said a "tornado" or "twister" had brought out seven spots near the center of the sun's face as presented to American observers.

Damage to telegraph lines included burned out insulation and was expected to reach thousands of dollars.

These solar disturbances ordinarily occur in cycles, experts said, about every 11 years apart, but the last 11 year period ended three years ago. No severe disturbances had been expected.

Although nearly all scientists agree that sun spots are directly connected with the disturbances, the nature of the electrical discharges was a subject of dispute. One theory is that negative particles are discharged by the sun and caught in the earth's magnetic field. Another is that Alpha-particles with a plus charge come to earth from radioactive substances in the sun.

State 4-H Club Members Named

Selected as the outstanding delegates to a state-wide 4-H Club All-Star conference at the University of California were (left to right): Bertha Carlson, Arlington; Bob Bianchi, Gonzales; Belle Gaumer, Paradise; and Walter Hughes, Santa Barbara. The announcement was made today by Professor B. H. Crocheron, director of the University Agricultural Extension Service.

4-H ALL-STAR CONFERENCE HONORS FOUR DELEGATES

Two Girls And Two Boys Presented With Gold Pins Set With Diamond In Recognition Of Club Work; Two Attended From El Dorado County

Shirley Dixon and Vinton Veer-kamp, members of the Rescue 4-H Club, returned to their homes during the weekend following attendance at the annual 4-H Club All-Star Conference at the University at Berkeley, to which they had been nominated as delegates by their fellow club members and elected by the County 4-H Club Council.

In the closing session of the four-day meeting Professor B. H. Crocheron, director of the Agricultural Extension Service, announced that two boys and two girls had been selected as the outstanding club members attending the meeting. They are Bertha Carlson of Arlington, Riverside county; Bob Bianchi of Gonzales, Monterey county; Belle Gaumer of Paradise, Butte county, and Walter Hughes of Santa Barbara.

The four received gold 4-H pins set with diamonds as a gift from an anonymous donor. It is the first time such awards have been made.

The diamond pin winners were selected from a group of 73 All-Star delegates representing the 4-H clubs in 37 counties of the state. These are sponsored by the University Agricultural Extension Service.

The delegates selected have been outstanding leaders in their local 4-H clubs. All have been club members for at least eight years. The girls have specialized in clothing and home furnishing projects, the boys in livestock production and dairying.

Bob Bianchi, is the owner of a dairy herd worth approximately $1500 which has been built up during his past eight years of club work from a modest beginning with one Jersey calf. He has been president of his local club, county organization, and of the Gonzales High School student body.

Walter Hughes has returned consistent profits for the past eight years from 4-H club livestock projects. He now carries on a dairy business in which he produces milk from his own herd and his uncle distributes it. He is chairman of the Santa Barbara county senior 4-H Club group.

Bertha Carlson, a member of the Alford 4-H Club, has been in club work for ten years. For the past six years she has been assistant leader of her club. In addition she has acted as chairman of many important committees.

Belle Gaumer, assistant leader of the Paradise 4-H Club for the past two years, was in charge of part of the Wild Flower Exhibit of Flowers at the San Francisco World's Fair last year. She has held responsible positions in several special 4-H projects. During her high school career she had had complete charge of her own financing, buying, making, and caring for her own clothing.

SUPERVISORS MEET ON RUBICON ROAD FUND MONDAY MORNING

Three members of the Board of Supervisors, Chairman Heuser and Supervisors Breedlove and Hall, attended a special meeting of the board Monday morning to pass a resolution supporting an application for a grant of $2,000 of state funds for the repair of flood damage on the road between Wentworth Springs and Rubicon Springs.

The application is the same as one filed previously seeking state assistance in the repair of the road, damaged in severe storms of a year ago this past winter.

Supervisor Breedlove, in whose district the road is in part located, said he is hopeful that the road may be improved during the coming summer season.

HUSBAND FREE IN MURDER

Mrs. Belle Palmer Was Poisoned By Housekeeper, Los Angeles Jury Finds

Sentence will be passed Tuesday in the Los Angeles County Superior Court in the case of Mrs. Caroline Henslee, 50, who was convicted last Thursday of the first degree murder of Mrs. Belle Palmer, formerly of Placerville.

Mrs. Henslee, housekeeper for the 77-year-old invalid and her husband, Charles, 78, was convicted in a trial in which she and Mr. Palmer were both defendants.

The jury recommended life imprisonment.

According to the United Press, police arrested Mrs. Henslee and Palmer after an investigation disclosed Mrs. Palmer's death, at first thought to be from natural causes, resulted from poison. Mrs. Henslee and Palmer accused each other of poisoning his wife.

In his closing arguments, Prosecutor D. L. Di Vecchio charged the burden of guilt rested with Mrs. Henslee.

Tears streamed from Palmer's eyes as the verdict was read. Mrs. Henslee sat tight lipped in her chair and lowered her eyes, but she showed no visible emotion. In the trial she had testified that after her employment by the Palmers she was accepted as "one of the family," and kissed both husband and wife good night as she saw them to bed.

Palmer insisted throughout the trial he was innocent of killing his wife, whom he had nursed for 13 of their 20 years of married life.

The state charged Mrs. Henslee poisoned Mrs. Palmer to "get her out of the way" and enmesh herself to Palmer. Testimony indicated she was wearing Mrs. Palmer's jewelry the day of her death.

Mr. and Mrs. Palmer made their home in Placerville for a number of years, residing on Bedford Avenue, where they operated an apartment dwelling near the corner of Coleman Street.

After disposing of this property, they moved to a ranch in the French Creek section and subsequently moved from there to Los Angeles where Mr. Palmer and their two sons now reside.

Easter Parade Rained Out

Churches Of Community Crowded By Worshippers On Sunday Morning

Churches of the community were crowded with worshippers on Easter Sunday morning but inclement weather put a definite curb upon the Easter parade.

The annual sunrise service was held at the large cross on the W. S. Kirk property at 5:45 o'clock in the morning with Easter messages by the Rev. Rex Barron and the Rev. Harold Morehouse.

Miss Maxine Miller, who played the portable organ for the song service, was accompanied by the violins of Penelope Risser and Harold Morehouse, Jr.

In the various churches, special Easter programs were accompanied by music and messages appropriate to the day. The Easter observance of El Dorado Commandery No. 4, Knights Templar, was included in the worship services at the Church of Our Saviour.

Skies which had been generally overcast during the morning brought a light sprinkle about the noon hour and a majority of the worshippers hurried from the churches to their automobiles to spare their "Easter bonnets" the storm.

During the later afternoon, the threatened storm broke into a brisk rain which continued almost until sun-down.

Meet Me at MIDNIGHT
RUTH LOUISE AYERS
© 1939 by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Caroline Jay and Garret Cassidy love each other but, because Garret is a shiftless poolroom loafer, Caroline's mother has forbidden her to see him. Mrs. Jay, superintendent of the Avon Home for the Aged, wants Caroline to encourage Henry Avon, whose wealthy mother is head of the Home's board of directors. One afternoon, however, Caroline meets Garret and they are married secretly. On the way back to town they strike and kill an old man, Pop Whistler, who has just run away from the Home. Frightened, they leave him lying by the roadside. Meanwhile, Mrs. Avon phones to Mrs. Jay, inviting Caroline to her country home for a week. Mrs. Jay accepts eagerly, but when Caroline returns home she is determined to find some way out, for she has agreed to meet Garret outside of the chapel at midnight, after keeping her date with Henry Avon.

CHAPTER XVIII

SUMMER sun had burned Henry Avon to a ruddy copper color and bleached his hair tawny.

He dressed late in the afternoon after he had come in from the lake shore where he volunteered as life guard for a few hours each day.

When his mother saw him, in white linen suit and cadet blue tie, she said, "You look positively handsome."

He laughed. "Same old flatterer."

His mother smiled fondly. "Now do be awfully careful driving home with that precious Caroline," she urged. "And don't wait until the town closes before you start back."

"But supposing she can't come," he said. "After all, she wasn't there when you asked her mother."

"Don't worry about that," said Mrs. Avon in her deep voice. "She'll be thrilled to come. You're the main attraction. I'm sure you can persuade her."

The Avon lodge set on the lake front, pine trees thick around it. It had been built for comfort—a millionaire's comfort. A big living room with fire places at each end was the main room. There was a dining room with rustic furnishings, a billiard room and library, a large colonial kitchen and many bedrooms to house the family and their guests.

Henry drove the roadster out of the garage and stopped at the front to say goodby to his mother. "No speeding," she cautioned. "See you in the morning," he laughed.

"You'll see me tonight when you get back," his mother assured him. "After all, I insist on being up to welcome a guest."

HENRY AVON was twenty-two. Just entering his senior year at Princeton, he looked forward after that to a job in the Avon tinplate mills. He would never carve out a brilliant career, but he would be dependable and smart enough to take his place as one of the future owners of the company.

He had a capacity for making friends easily. No one could say Henry Avon was liked merely because of the money behind him. Nor did he select his friends and his girls because of their families or fortunes.

It didn't matter to him, as he drove along the highway leading to the city, that Caroline Jay was the daughter of a widowed mother who worked for her living, nor that Caroline would never be presented to society or make her debut at a bachelor's cotillion. He had liked her a long time, but had found her disconcertingly offhand with him. It had only been since the summer vacation that he'd realized he was in love with her. He'd found in her the quiet companionship that he liked. He thought, "If she'll stay a week, we'll have a chance to become really acquainted. She'll see I'm crazy about her and it will make a difference in the way she thinks about me."

The ride back to the lake in the moonlight would help, too. He visualized her silver head against the dark leather upholstery of his roadster.

HENRY AVON was not a romanticist—yet the sturdiness of his heart made the one he loved more endeared to him than if he had spent affection lavishly. It would be heavenly, he thought, to go back to Princeton next month, knowing that Caroline would be waiting for him.

"We could be married right after commencement," he told himself. "Start young like mother and dad did. I'd take her around the world on a honeymoon—get her away from those creepy old folks at the Home."

The picture of a slim, silver-gold bride by his side made the miles fly as he sped toward the city outskirts where the Home was located.

It was early when he reached the city but he headed toward the city outskirts where the Home was located.

He was impatient to see Caroline as it neared eight o'clock. If he arrived a little ahead of time, he could wait on the porch, chatting with some of the old people who clustered there on summer nights.

WHEN he reached the Home, he drove up a side street and parked the car. He could see groups of oldtimers on the Home grounds. "They look as if they'd lost something," he thought.

When he started across the garden path, he saw the porch was empty except for a man and a little boy. Henry shuddered as he drew closer. The man was deformed—a strange unsightly figure, leaning close to the little boy who was listening to him with grave attention.

"That kid doesn't seem to mind the old fellow," Henry thought. "I couldn't join them. I'd be jittery all evening thinking of his twitching face and shoulders. Small wonder Caroline is so quiet and reserved, living around such people."

Henry was not unkind. Like his father, he would give generously to the maintenance of the Avon Home for the Aged. It had been the first Henry Avon, founder of the tinplate mills, who had built and endowed the Home. His descendants would not desert the charity. But young Henry had a healthy mistrust of anything ugly and old.

So he turned and went down toward a block of stores on the main street across from the Home. There was a sign, "Pool Room—Beer Served Here," close by. Henry Avon walked to it and went in through the swinging doors. A dozen pairs of suspicious eyes looked up at him.

N. Y. A. BUILDS JOBS THROUGH BUILDINGS

Today's Sport Parade

By Henry McLemore
United Press Staff Correspondent

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., (UP)—It wasn't until today that I realized there was a definite kinship between baseball and boxing. As recently as yesterday I would have stoutly (and I mean "stoutly" to the tune of 185 pounds and twin chins) denied there was any connection between, say, right field and a right cross. But all of a sudden I found myself lolling under a palm tree with Moe Berg of the Boston Red Sox, one of the better minds, baseball or otherwise, in this country. And before we quit lolling he had established a definite relationship between the two.

He bound them together with the expression "one-two punch."

There never was a boxing champion who didn't have a one-two punch. Berg pointed out, and then continued to explain that the chief contention for the major league pennants this year would be made by teams with this same thing.

"Let's look at the American League," Berg said. "Barring accident the main contention will be between the Yankees and the Red Sox. Each of the clubs can throw a deadly one-two punch. On the Yanks the one-two is provided by Joe DiMaggio and Bill Dickey. DiMaggio sets up the opposition and Dickey knocks it out."

Remembering Charley Keller, I suggested that perhaps the Yanks had gone a step further and developed a one-two-three punch.

"Please," Berg said, in a voice rich with melancholy, "let's limit this to just two hitters. Now take the Red Sox. Our one-two punch is thrown by Jimmy Foxx and Ted Williams. Perhaps I'm biased but to me those two fellows form the best one-two in baseball. I wouldn't swap them for anything in the league."

The one-two punch holds true in the National League. The champion Cincinnati Reds and their sternest challengers, the Cardinals, have the toughest bing-bang combinations in the Ford Frick belt. The Reds can throw Frank McCormick and Ival Goodman at opposing pitchers. And the Cards have Johnny Mize and Ducky Medwick, that is, if Medwick signs.

And he is sure to. Speaking of Ducky Wucky, it will be he who will have to come to terms. Unpopular with the players (who think he cost them the pennant last year by loafing) and unpopular with Manager Blades (who resents the several things Medwick has said about him) and unpopular with owner Sam Breadon (who thinks he is being shoved around a bit and held up) Joe probably will have to capitulate or sit out the 1940 baseball dance.

But to get back to the one-two punch. All of the combinations mentioned present a right-handed hitter and a left-handed hitter. That is the ideal combination. As Paul Derringer told me—and Derringer is a fair country judge—that combination makes it impossible for a pitcher to let up even a little bit. "Be the pitcher a right-hander or a left-hander," says Paul. "He must bear down with all he has on at least one of them."

But enough of this informative writing. The next thing you know I'll be explaining the technique of the drag bunt, or why a good base runner tags second with his left foot when running out a triple.

It is also expected to bring in recommendations for more efficient and economical administration of relief, as well as suggestions for the speeding up of employment of jobless workers in private industry.

There is general recognition on the part of tax-conscious members of the Legislature that the public's "capacity to pay" has just about been exhausted, and that government must turn over a new leaf and start to live within its income. If the people back home are alert to their opportunity, a start can be made toward returning government in California to sane, economical and reasonable standards. The Legislature is willing, but it wants and deserves support from the home-folks!

LOS ANGELES SHERIFF RAIDS EXCLUSIVE GAMING CLUB

HOLLYWOOD, (UP)—Hollywood's big-time movie gamblers today surveyed the wreckage of the famous Clover Club, to which sheriff's officers had applied battering rams in lieu of admittance cards, and sought a new location for perhaps America's biggest dice games.

Those picture makers who gamble daily with a fickle public in the production of every film they make and then gamble some more at night with the Clover's croupiers found that Sheriff Capt. Geo. Contreras had shown no respect for their plush-lined rendezvous. He had confiscated a list of the "members," which he said contained the names of dozens of movie notables, smashed mirrored doors and secret pannels, carted away the roulette wheels and dice tables, shoed formally dressed patrons to their homes, and left two deputies in the lobby to see that the wheels didn't start clicking again. He had made no arrests, but said he was investigating the club's mysterious owners.

PATTERSON BOLTS "HARMONY" LINEUP OF STATE DEMOCRATS

SAN FRANCISCO, (UP)—A new split in the democratic ranks in California was achieved today when Lieut. Gov. Ellis E. Patterson announced he would head, with the backing of labor's non-partisan league and the CIO, a delegation seeking re-election of President Roosevelt in the May 7 presidential primary.

Patterson withdrew from a "harmony" ticket drawn up by Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes, Gov. Culbert Olson and former senator, William Gibbs McAdoo, to head the new group which, he said, would campaign on principles instead of personalities.

Mrs. Robert Patterson and son, Bob, and Miss Virginia Casselman drove to Woodland Sunday and called on the Al Fortna family.

THE SPIRIT OF

by JOHN CLINTON

About this time of year the birds get up early and sit around outside my window yapping their silly heads off. The wind slips down from the foothills. The grass smells like the finest perfume in the world.

And it all gives me a pain in the neck! 'Cause I have to work!

But I've a notion that if the local paper were to print a "Where to go" this week end, I'd be a push-over.

If you're having the same stirrings in your heart, here's an idea—call your neighborhood Union Oil station and tell the boys to pick up your car and give it the once-over-lightly treatment! This consists of a Stop-Wear lubrication job that will iron out that winter squeaking and stiffness which besets all cars.

Then have them drain off that thin, dirty oil in your crankcase, and refill it with Triton. (Triton changes ping to purr in 2 to 3 thousand miles.)

Then they'll dress the running boards, and the side-walls of your tires, check the battery, dust off the car, vacuum the upholstery and a whole bunch of other odds and ends that need doing!

Then this week-end, load the family in the car—point it at the mountains or the sea—and let 'er rip! What happened to the car down at the Union Oil station will make her seem like a 32-cylinder sports job. And also, see if you're not a new man come next Monday!

Golden Oak mine in the Kelsey district.

Although it was indicated that some preliminary arrangements looking to a transfer of the Ford dealership are under way, they had not reached a stage Monday morning which would permit of a definite announcement.

The Ford dealership of Mr. Wilson as operated by Mr. Otto has maintained an average of fifteen employees with a payroll of about $2,500 per month. It is understood that plans for the dealership in the future contemplate the maintenance, in so far as is possible, of the complete garage staff.

The Collins Studebaker agency, which operates a unit in Georgetown at the Forget-me-not Garage, has for two years past maintained its Placerville headquarters in Upper Placerville at Church and Union Streets.

Miss Louise Sicks, who has been ill for several weeks, came up from Corte Madera on Saturday and will spend the week here with Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Lyon. Her health is much improved and she expects to return to the Bay District during the coming weekend.

HIGGINS DRIVES CHAMPION IN ECONOMY TEST ON SATURDAY

H. E. Higgins was at the wheel and John A. Winkelman, county sealer of weights and measures was the official observer in an economy test drive made Saturday morning using a stock model 1940 Studebaker Champion from the C. S. Collins agency.

Higgins reported, with Winkelman's verification, that he obtained twenty-nine and four tenths of a mile of automobile mileage with the Champion, using a measured gallon of gasoline. The route was from the railroad station in Placerville to the top of the Clarksville hill opposite the Mayhew residence, and return, the gallon being exhausted as the party reached the county fairgrounds on the return trip.

Mr. Higgins is interested in the test because it is a part of a nationwide contest sponsored by Studebaker in which the driver making the best showing in the Sacramento district will receive $100 and the driver making the second best mileage will receive $50. The national grand prize is a new Studebaker Champion.

C. S. Collins, Studebaker dealer, who followed the car in another machine on its economy test was well pleased with the showing but said he feared other tests on level roads may show a higher mileage.

GRAVE OF OKEI SAN IS SUBJECT OF PICTURES AND SKETCH IN SACRAMENTO PAPER; COLOMAN INTERVIEWED ON PROJECT

A recent edition of The Sacramento Bee contained two pictures of the Japanese grave in the Coloma and Gold Hill vicinity near the site at which a Japanese group launched an unsuccessful colonization project in this county during the late 1860s.

Although the project, as is well known to older residents of the county met with failure the site of the colony is visited annually by numerous Japanese as well as by touring sight-seers.

The pictures which The Bee presented included a closeup of the headstone of the grave of Okei San, and a general picture of the grave with Chamber of Commerce Secretary Wallace M. Ripley viewing the plot.

The article, under a Coloma dateline, said:

On the side of a hill hidden by a growth of mountain shrubbery and trees a short distance from the roadside between Coloma and Gold Hill is a grave to which many Japanese from all over the state make a pilgrimage at least once a year.

The grave is that of Okei San, a 19 year old Japanese girl who died in 1871.

Everett De Lory of Gold Hill who has made a study of the history of the grave reports that the Japanese of California make their annual trip to this shrine because Okei was the first Japanese colonist to die on this foreign soil, outside the Japanese Empire.

The grave not only is the resting place of what to the Japanese people was a pioneer colonist but in it lies buried the withered hopes and dreams to bring a bit of the Land of Cherry Blossoms to California.

According to De Lory, the girl was a member of what the Japanese say was the first unit of colonists to leave Japan for the United States. This was in 1868. She accompanied a group of forty laborers and an indefinite number of women to Gold Hill from Japan, under the leadership of a Dutchman by the name of Snell.

As De Lory reconstructs the story, Snell was a promoter, who interested officials high in the Imperial Japanese government in starting a tea plantation in California. They financed the venture and in 1868 the group arrived in this state.

He further recounts the plantation was a failure and Snell later returned to Japan where he was beheaded because he had squandered the emperor's funds.

A well beaten path leads from an iron gate, erected by the roadside by Japanese, to the sylvan grave. Picnics often are held nearby and it is not uncommon on some Sundays for as many as fifty to 100 Japanese to visit the grave of the girl who sailed eastward from Japan toward the rising sun, the symbol of her people.

Marilyn Ripley was among the Sacramento Junior College students at home for the Easter weekend.

Mrs. Don Robinson and children were Easter Sunday visitors at Oakland.
